If you just purchased a CT, start with the valve inspection and adjustment just to make sure everything is OK or if the engine doesn't want to start or is not operating properly. The second step should be inspecting and/or adjusting the contact breaker points, you can then return here to inspect and/or adjust the timing.

Adjusting Timing - CT90-CT110

I guess this might be some kind of base-line to set it to before beginning adjustments? and maybe someone in the past just thought it was the correct final position without actually adjusting the timing. BTW that looks pretty similar to the orientation of my adjustment as well, and I know my timing sprocket is properly aligned, so I vote for ...
