The Master Molecule. It should be understood first that prior to 1953 very few researchers cared much about DNA. Many were eagerly searching for the chemical nature of the gene, the master molecule of heredity. It was clear by the 1920s that genes were located in chromosomes, dense tangles of nucleic acid and protein in the nucleus of cells.

DNA, the master molecule of Life DNA or Deoxyribonucleic acid is the genetic material in human beings and almost all other living organisms. Every cell in the body has the same DNA, most of the DNA is found inside the nucleus of the cell which is called nuclear DNA and a very small amount of DNA is located in Mitochondria which in turn called as Mitochondrial DNA.
